Breathtaking views, unparalleled landscapes, luxury lodges and wonderful wildlife. Welcome to Kenya

HOT-AIR BALLOONING OVER THE MASAI MARA

Samburu National Reserve Due to the very arid conditions, the Samburu National Reserve is an excellent spot for great game viewing. Species here are unique to this area and clients might see reticulated giraffe, Somali ostrich, gerenuk, Grevy's zebra and Jackson's hartebeest. It's also possible to meet some of the Samburu tribe and witness their traditional way of life.

Stay: Larsens Camp – 20 discreetly sited, en-suite tents with chic safari-style beds and private decks add luxury to the safari experience. Exquisite à la carte dining follows days on 4x4 safari or on foot with experienced guides.

Laikipia Plateau This area is home to more endangered species, such as black rhino, than anywhere else in East Africa. In this important and biologically diverse wildlife refuge, the largest population of elephant outside of Kenya's national parks and reserves resides. Clients can track lion or enjoy a more active pace with camel and horseback safaris.

Stay: Ol Malo – for exclusivity or total privacy, clients should head to this intimate lodge. Set on a rocky escarpment, it's family run and offers incredible hospitality and luxury in a magnificent setting.

A COAST WITH THE MOST

SOUTH

Amboseli National Park In the country's oldest national park, the scenery is majestic but the game even more so. Elephant, myriad bird species, Masai giraffe, hippo, lion, leopard and cheetah can all be found here.

Stay: Tortilis Camp – facing Mount Kilimanjaro, with endless views across vast plains, Tortilis is a charming tented eco-camp. Here visitors will likely encounter elephant and other prolific game.

Chyulu Hills For more than a safari holiday, the 'green hills of Africa' in Chyulu provide epic views of vivid colours, resident wildlife and a volcanic mountain landscape. Rhino, Cape buffalo and elephant abound here but the vast lava cones or Kisula Caves provide an outstanding backdrop for hiking and horse safaris.

Stay: Ol Donyo Lodge – resting on the slopes of the Chyulu Hills National Park, this lodge has been rich in history, passion and conservation ever since its founder realised visiting tourists could help the local Maasai population's survival. And he built a lodge here to achieve just that.

EAST

Tsavo East & West National Parks Home to the endangered black rhino, these are Kenya's largest parks. Their wild surroundings make game viewing more challenging but far more rewarding. Any itinerary must include Mzima Springs, an underwater observation post for crocodile and hippo viewings.

Stay: Finch Hattons – set in an unrivalled location in Tsavo West National Park, where wildlife includes red elephant. This amazing camp features spacious tents, opulent furniture, free-standing baths and period writing desks. The dining is five-star and kids are entertained, while parents use the spa, gym, home theatre, hammam or library.

The Kenyan coast A few days on the coast make for an idyllic way to bring an East African safari to a satisfying close, or simply for an unforgettable stand-alone beach getaway. With its shimmering turquoise waters of Watamu, white-sand beaches of Diani and pristine coral reefs, the Kenyan coast is about as close to a tropical paradise as it gets.

WEST

Masai Mara Here the Great Migration takes place between July and September (depending on rains). The wildlife is not the only reason to visit this cultural haven though – A&K can offer the opportunity to experience Kenya's rich heritage. Many local communities still follow the traditional way of life with ancient customs. Part of the visit must be to see a Maasai village and learn about the traditional way of life and community development.

Stay: Sanctuary Olonana – located in the heart of Kenya's big-game country. This lodge, which was refurbished in early 2018, nestles in the Masai Mara conservation area on the banks of the Mara River. This is the beautiful setting for Big Five sightings. Personalised service and an intimate and relaxed atmosphere make for a spectacular stay.
